Panel Discussion on Employer Worksite Clinics

Please mark your calendar for upcoming 2018 Forum All-Stakeholder meetings:

May 17, July 25, September 12

Larry Boress

Larry Boress, MPA, serves as Executive Director of the National Association of Worksite Health Centers, the nation's only organization for employers interested in planning and implementing onsite and near-site health and wellness centers. He interacts with clinic and wellness vendors, public and private employers who sponsor clinics and conducts surveys and research on the ROI and performance of worksite services and those who supply them to employers. From 2006-2017, he held the position of President & CEO of the Midwest Business Group on Health. As part of MBGH, he led the analysis and development of diabetes, pain management, wellness, specialty drug, weight management and smoking cessation toolkits and educational programs for employers.

Candace Shaffer

Candace Shaffer, M.S., CWPM, director of benefits for Purdue University, is responsible for the strategic planning and customer service of a strong benefits plan for employees and their families. She earned both her bachelor's and master's degrees from Purdue University. Prior to returning to Purdue as a staff member, Candace worked for a non-for-profit early childhood agency focusing on program development. She believes benefits is more than just medical, Rx and dental benefits; it also includes retirement, leaves, workers compensation, families and the systems and processes in place to help employees and families engage in those programs. Candace's goal is to ensure quality programs and services are available to help meet the needs of employees and their families at whatever stage of life they are at, whether they are a single person or a three-generation family, we need to be a resource for employees at the point in time they need support.
